Criminal Law

Abstract

A person who inflicts bodily harm should compensate the harms inflicted. But this question that what is the amount of Dia has different answers. Some believes the Dia should be accounted based on the amount of the day the crime was done because the inflicting the bodily harm is this day. Some other believes the day of payment is the day of issuing the verdict because in this day the offender was convicted to it. Some others believe the manhunt of Dia is accounted based on the day of payment. The later view is more appropriate due to preventive criminal policy, protection of victim and some various juridical rules like: No Harassment and respecting Muslim life. New criminal .490 law has accepted this view in article
